Coast Guard Missions

The Coast Guard's missions are divided into three main categories: maritime safety, maritime security, and environmental protection.

Maritime Safety

The Coast Guard's maritime safety mission includes search and rescue, aids to navigation, and marine safety inspections.

The Coast Guard's search and rescue mission is to save lives and property at sea. The Coast Guard responds to over 40,000 search and rescue cases each year.

The Coast Guard's aids to navigation mission is to maintain a system of buoys, lights, and other aids to navigation that help mariners navigate safely.

The Coast Guard's marine safety inspections mission is to ensure that commercial vessels are safe to operate.

Maritime Security

The Coast Guard's maritime security mission includes port security, drug interdiction, and maritime counterterrorism.

The Coast Guard's port security mission is to protect the nation's ports from terrorist attacks.

The Coast Guard's drug interdiction mission is to stop the flow of illegal drugs into the United States.

The Coast Guard's maritime counterterrorism mission is to protect the nation from terrorist attacks at sea.

Environmental Protection

The Coast Guard's environmental protection mission includes oil spill response, marine pollution enforcement, and living marine resources protection.

The Coast Guard's oil spill response mission is to respond to oil spills and prevent them from harming the environment.

The Coast Guard's marine pollution enforcement mission is to enforce the nation's laws against marine pollution.

The Coast Guard's living marine resources protection mission is to protect the nation's fish and wildlife resources.

Coast Guard History

The Coast Guard was founded in 1790 as the Revenue Cutter Service. The Revenue Cutter Service was responsible for collecting customs duties and enforcing the nation's navigation laws.

In 1915, the Revenue Cutter Service was merged with the United States Life-Saving Service to form the United States Coast Guard.

The Coast Guard has played a vital role in every major American war. In World War II, the Coast Guard served in both the Atlantic and Pacific theaters of operations.

After World War II, the Coast Guard continued to play a vital role in national defense. The Coast Guard served in the Korean War, the Vietnam War, and the Gulf War.

Coast Guard Today

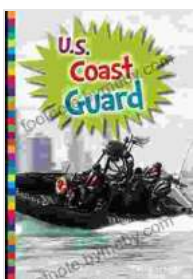

Today, the Coast Guard is a modern, technologically advanced maritime force. The Coast Guard has a fleet of over 200 ships, aircraft, and boats. The Coast Guard also has over 40,000 active duty and reserve personnel.

The Coast Guard is committed to serving the American people. The Coast Guard is always ready to respond to any emergency, at any time.

The Coast Guard is an essential part of the United States Armed Forces. The Coast Guard's missions are vital to national security and the safety of the American people.

If you are interested in serving your country, the Coast Guard is a great option. The Coast Guard offers a variety of opportunities to serve, both on active duty and in the reserves.
