David Fine was a one-of-a-kind character. A self-made millionaire, he made his fortune selling fake bull semen to farmers. His story is a wild ride of greed, ambition, and ultimately, redemption.

Fine was born in 1940 in a small town in New York. He was a bright kid, but he was also a bit of a troublemaker. He dropped out of high school and started working at a local factory.

In the early 1960s, Fine started selling bull semen to farmers. At first, he was just a small-time operator, but he quickly realized that there was a lot of money to be made in the bull semen business.

Fine started selling fake bull semen to farmers. He would buy cheap semen from slaughterhouses and then sell it to farmers at a huge markup. He also started selling other products, such as artificial insemination equipment and bull semen extenders.

Fine's business quickly grew into a multi-million dollar empire. He owned a fleet of trucks and employed dozens of people. He also had a reputation as a ruthless businessman. He was known for being aggressive and for cutting corners.

In the early 1980s, Fine's business started to unravel. Farmers were starting to realize that they were being sold fake bull semen. Fine was also facing legal challenges from the government.

In 1984, Fine was convicted of fraud and sentenced to prison. He served five years in prison and was released in 1989.

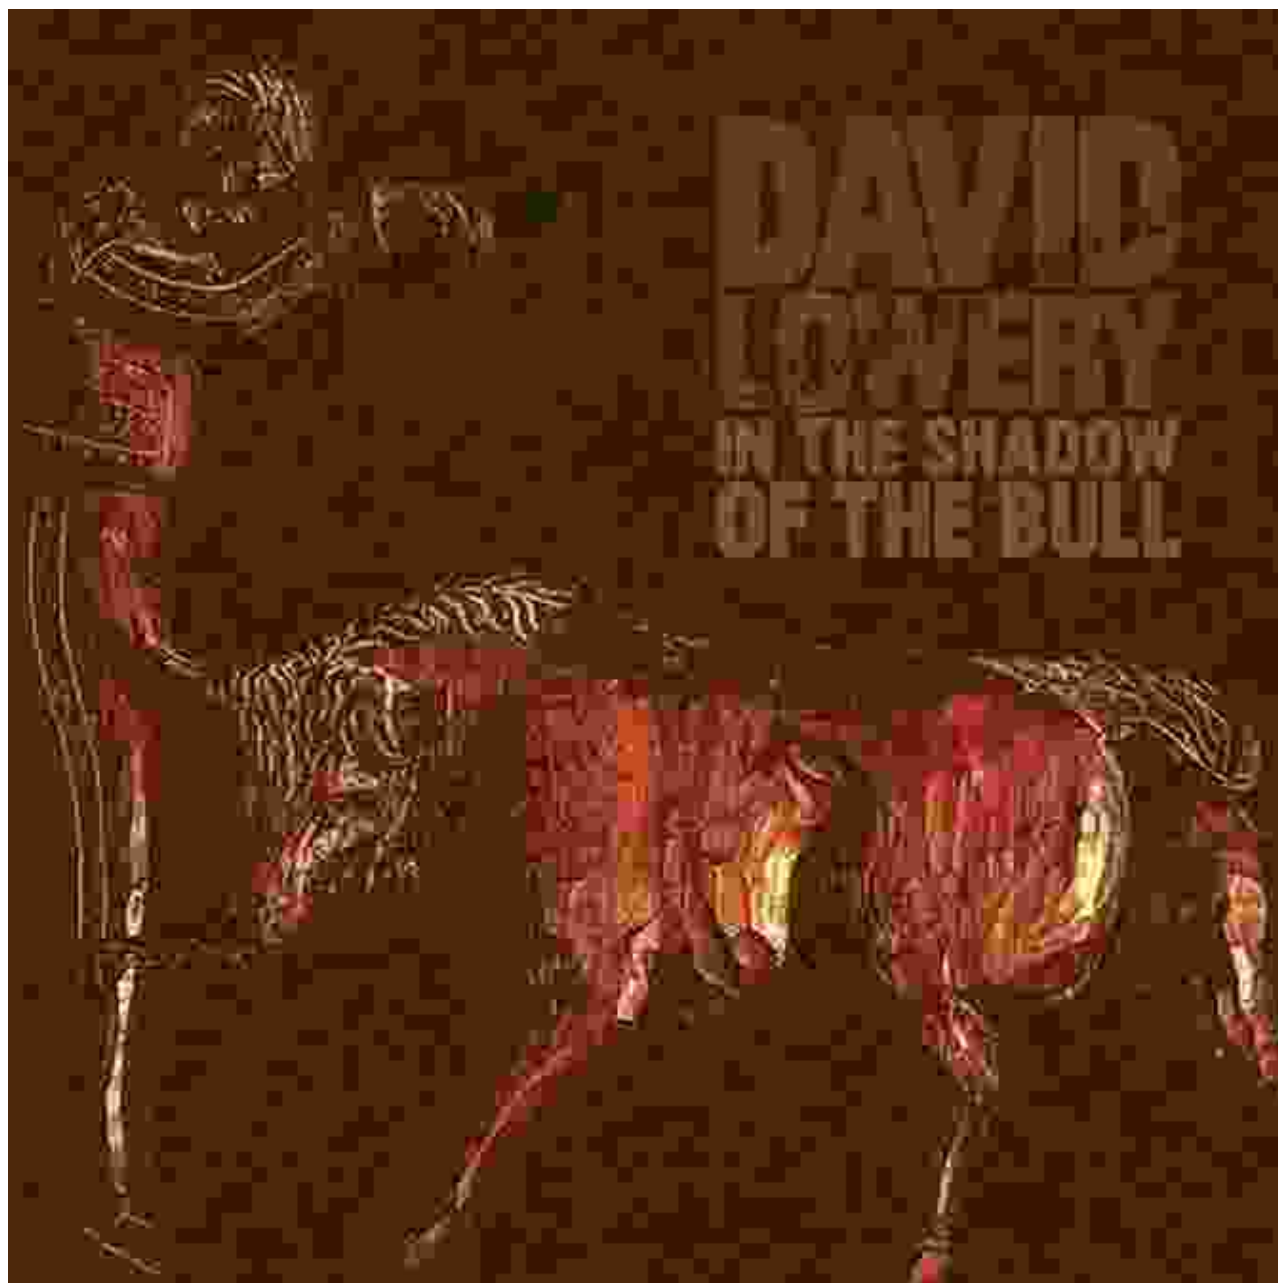

After his release from prison, Fine started a new life. He became a motivational speaker and author. He also started a non-profit organization that helps people who have been convicted of crimes.

Fine died in 2015 at the age of 75. He left behind a legacy of greed, ambition, and redemption. His story is a cautionary tale about the dangers of pursuing wealth and power at all costs.
