The novel tells the story of a young man named David who is struggling to find his place in the world. He is adrift and alone, and he feels like he is invisible to everyone around him.

One day, David meets an older man named George who offers him a strange and tempting proposition: to become his "self portrait." George is a successful artist, and he wants David to pose for him as a model. David agrees, and soon he finds himself caught up in a strange and dangerous game.

As David poses for George, he begins to lose his sense of self. He starts to take on George's mannerisms and speech patterns, and he even begins to think like him. David becomes increasingly isolated from the outside world, and he becomes more and more dependent on George.

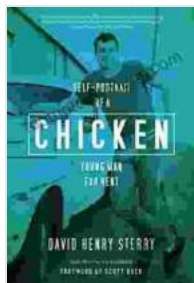

As the novel progresses, the line between reality and illusion begins to blur. David is no longer sure who he is or what he wants. He is trapped in a downward spiral, and he is desperate for a way out.
